Life and confession of Aseneta

It was the fifth day of the second month, the first of the seven fruitful years. Pharaoh sent Joseph to visit all the land of Egypt. And Joseph came to the city of the sun. And he spent there collecting wheat from those parts like seashore.

There was a man in that city, the satrap of Pharaoh. And he was above all the satraps and nobles of Pharaoh. And he was a very rich man, and wise and meek. And he was Pharaoh's counselor, and his name was Pentephria. And he was the elder of the Sun City. He had a daughter, an 18-year-old girl, tall, beautiful and very beautiful - more than all the girls in the world, because none of them was like her than the Egyptian and Jewish daughters. She was as great as Sarah, as beautiful as Rebekah, and as good as Rachel. And it was the name of the girl Aseneta.

Her beauty was heard all over the country. And all the sons of the nobles, and the dukes, and the kings of marriage, and all the sons of the mighty, passed through it. And envy would be great among and enmity great around her. The brothers tried each other for her sake. Pharaoh's first son also heard of her and asked his father to marry her. He said to him, Pentephry, the elders of the city of the sun, for a wife."

ofYou are the king of the whole universe. Don't, though, but here is the daughter of the king Joachim betrothed to you, and the empress is very beautiful. Therefore, take her for a wife. ” Aseneta had humiliated every man, and bored and bored every man. And no one saw it, because the tower in Penthephry's court was large and very high, and at the top of it was a palace with ten chambers. And the first chamber was large and beautiful, paved with red stone, and its walls decorated with various and precious stones. And the ceiling of the chamber was golden. Inside were the gods of Egypt, of whom there were innumerable - gold and silver and the most beloved of the Assenites. And he feared them, and offered them sacrifices.

The other room had only the dresses and suitcases of Asenet's jewelry. And there was much gold in it, and silver, and garments covered with gold, and linen in particular. And there was all her girly jewelry.

The third chamber had all the treasures of the earth and was the treasury of Asenet. The other seven chambers had seven girls, each with a chamber. And they were the maids of Aseneth. There were even her peers, born the same night with her. And they were very beautiful, like the stars of heaven. And men never talked to them, not even male children. There were three windows in the big room. Asenetino's virginity was kept in her. One window faced the courtyard to the east, another to the north facing the lobby, and a third facing south toward the door. The bed of gold stood in the chamber facing the window facing east and was covered with gold-woven purple, and ruby and vison woven. There was never a man with a woman on that bed, except Aseneta herself.

And there was a great court around that house, and a wall was very high around the court, with a large stone.
There were four iron gates in the courtyard, and there were 18 guards on guard, young and strong, armed. And different trees were planted next to the walls, beautiful, with all kinds of fruits. And all their fruits were ripe at that time, because it was harvest time. To the right of the courtyard was a source of abundant water. And under the well was a large marble trough in which water was collected from that spring. From there the river flowed, flowing in the middle of the yard and watering all the trees that were in it.

On the eighteenth day of the fourth month, in the first month of seven years, Joseph came to the region of the city of the sun and gathered the wheat of that region like the sand of the sea. And as Joseph approached that city, he sent twelve husbands in front of him, Penthephrius, the elder of the city of the sun, saying:

When Penthephrius heard this, he rejoiced with great joy, and said, Lord God of Joseph!
   Blessed
   "and her parents rejoiced, and said, Let me go and see my father and my mother, who came from the inheritance of their inheritance."
   "and he put the bracelet on his arm and leg, and adorned himself with golden wreaths. He put on his neck an ornament made of precious stones, which everywhere had the names of Egyptian gods, engraved everywhere on bracelets on the stones. And he put his tiara on his head and hurried down from his palace. And he came to his father and mother and kissed them. Pentephria and his daughter's wife rejoiced with their great joy, because they saw her adorned as the bride of God. And he brought forth all the fruit that they had brought out of their field, and gave it to his daughter. And Aseneth rejoiced in all the fruits: fruits, grapes, dates and figs. And Pentephia said to her daughter:

"Child!"
And she said:
"Here I am, my lord!"
And he said to her:
"Sit between us and I will tell you my words." And Aseneth sat between his father and mother.

father He is the prince of all Egypt, and Pharaoh made him lord of all the land. And he should feed the whole country with wheat and save it from the coming famine. Joseph is a man pious and smart and chaste as you are today, and a man strong in wisdom, and the Spirit of God and the grace of God are on him. Come, therefore, my child, and I will deliver you to him for a wife, and you will be his bride and he will be your husband forever.

"And he was enraged with great fury and looked at his father with wide eyes and said:

"Why do you say that, my lord and my father, and do you want to deliver me with your sermons as a slave to a foreign husband and a refugee bought? Isn't he a Canaanite and brought here from there? Did he not lie with his master and be thrown into prison with him, and Pharaoh brought him out of the dungeon, because he understood his dream? Is not it? Let me be bound to the king's only son, because he is the king of the whole country.

" And, behold, a young man from the servants of Penthephrius ran and said,

"Behold, Joseph stands before the gates of our house!" she comes to her father's house. Penthephrius went out to meet Joseph, and his wife, and all his family. And he opened the door on the east side of the court. And Joseph came in, sitting on Pharaoh's chariot. And four horses were harnessed, white as snow, with golden reins. The chariot was chained with gold. And Joseph was clothed in white raiment. His robe was red, woven with gold and gold; and a golden crown on his head. Around the wreath were twelve selected stones, and above the stones were twelve golden stars. And the scepter of the king was in his right hand. And above it was an olive branch. There was a lot of fruit on it and there was too much oil in it.

And Joseph entered into the court. And the door was shut, and the man and the woman remained outside, because the guards at the entrance closed the door in front of all the strangers. Penthephrius and his wife and all his family came, except his only daughter Aseneth, and worshiped Joseph facing the earth. And Joseph got out of his chariot and greeted them with his right hand.

And he saw Aseneth Joseph, and loved her very much, and softened her heart, and weakened her knees, and trembled her body, and was afraid of great fear, and sighed and said:
"Where I go and where I hide from his face? And how will Joseph, the servant of God, look at me, since I spoke evil about him? Where do I run and hide when he sees everything hidden and nothing is hidden from him because of the light that is in him? And now be merciful, O God of Joseph, for I have spoken evil words in ignorance! What have I seen now miserable? Did I not say, saying, Joseph, the son of the shepherd, is coming from the land of Canaan, and today the sun is coming down from heaven to us in his chariot and entering our house? And I humiliated him in a senseless and impudent manner and uttered evil words about him, and I did not know how Joseph was the son of God, because which of the people ever gave birth to such beauty, and what womb gave birth to such in the world? Woe to me, miserable and foolish, how I said evil words to my father! Now, if my father had given me to Joseph as a handmaid and a slave, I would have served him forever."

And Joseph entered the house of Penthephry and sat on the throne. And he washed his feet Pentephria and set him a table separately, because he did not eat with the Egyptians, but he hated them. Joseph said to Pentefri and his relatives:

"Who is the woman who stood at the window? Let him go out of this city, after all."

Because Joseph was afraid that he would suffer from her like other Egyptian women, because all the wives and daughters of the nobles and dukes of Egypt grieved him, wanting to sleep with him. And many of the wives and daughters of Egypt, as many as Joseph saw, suffered greatly because of his beauty. And they prayed to him with gold and silver and precious gifts, saying,
"I will not sin before the God of Israel."
insult of the wives of strangers, do not associate with them, for [it is] destruction and perdition."

(321)

Therefore Joseph said that the woman should leave the temple. And Pentephrrius said:
"The one they see in the palace is not someone else's, but our daughter, a girl, and she hates every man, and no other man has ever seen her except you today. And if you want, let her come and talk to you, because she is our daughter and your sister.

" And Joseph said to Pente and his wife,
"If she is your daughter, let her come." She is like my sister, and I will love her as my sister from today."

And Asenet's mother came out and brought her to Joseph.Pentephrrius said to his daughter,
"Kiss your brother, for he is as chaste as you are, and he hates every stranger's wife as you hate every stranger's man.

" And Joseph said to her,
"May God bless you, who revives every man!"
Pentephrrius said to Aseneti, and kiss your brother.

" befits a godly man, who blesses the living God with his mouth and eats bread blessed and incorruptible to kiss a foreign woman, who blesses the idols and the dead with his mouth, and eats bread of suffocation from the table, and drinks from their drink the cup of catching, and anoints himself with harmful fat. But a devout man kisses his mother and his sister, born of his mother, and his sister, who is from his tribe and family, and the woman who is the only one with him, who blesses the living God with his mouth. Pious woman (322) to kiss a foreign man, because hatred is before God. " aSeeing her, Joseph took great pity on her, because he was meek and merciful and God-fearing. And he lifted up his hand over his head and said:

"Lord God of my father Israel, Most High and mighty, who revives all and calls from darkness to light and from death to life alone, Lord, revive and renew this virgin and bless her with your Spirit, and your blessing to drink the cup which you chose before it was born, and to enter into your resting place which you have prepared for those who love you."

And Aseneth rejoiced at the blessing of Joseph with great joy. And she made haste, and went up to the palace, and fell on her bed in pain, for joy and sorrow, and fear, and great fire kept her from hearing these words of Joseph, which he spoke to her about the name of the Most High God. And he wept with great and bitter weeping. And he crucified himself with his gods, whom he worshiped, and waited for what would happen in the evening.

When he had finished eating and drinking, Joseph said to his servants,

Put the horses in the chariot
Joseph said, today, for this is the day when God will begin to do his work, and on the eighth day I will come to you again and be courted here."

When he left, Penthephria went out with his relatives in the field. And Aseneta was left alone with the girls, writhing and crying until the sun went down. He neither ate bread nor drank water. And while the others slept, she was the only one. And when he had opened the door, he went down, and found the doorkeeper sleeping with his children. And he hastened, and took off his veil, and filled it with rubbish, and went up to the palace, and spread it everywhere. And he locked the door hard with an iron key. And he sighed with great sighs and wept. And I heard the sighs of Asenet's girlfriend, whom he loved more than other girls. And he hurried and found the door locked. And hearing her sighs, he said:

"Why do you grieve, my lady, and what made you sad? Aseneta, who was closed inside, said to them: "My head hurts and I cannot open it for you now, because I am exhausted with all my limbs, but go among others to your room."

And she went to her other chamber, where the coffins of her clothes were. And when she had opened one of her ark, she took the black garment which was for her mourning, which she put on, and wept when her first brother died. And Aseneth took off his royal equipment and dressed in black. And he unfastened his golden girdle, and girded himself with a ribbon. And he took off the veil from his head, and the crown and the ring from his hand, and took all his garments, and cast them out of the window into nothing. And he took all the gods of his silver and gold, which were without number, and broke them into small pieces, and cast them into nothing, and they were needy. And he took his supper, and food, and meat, and fish, and all the sacrifices of his gods, and the vessels of wine, and their necessities, and threw everything to the dogs through the food windows. Dressed in a sackcloth and girded with a rope, she untied her braids, and sprinkled her head with ashes, and lay on the rubbish floor. And he often struck his chest with both hands. And she wept bitterly all night with sighs until morning and saw. And the ground beneath her was like the mud of her tears. And then Aseneth fell on his face in the garbage and lay down until the sun went down. This is what Aseneth did in seven days, without trying anything.

And on the eighth day he was moved from the floor on which he lay. And she was weakened by limbs from great appeasement. And he stretched out his hands and eyes to the east and said:

"Lord God, who gives to everything that breathes life, bring the invisible to light, you who created everything and revealed the unannounced, who raised heaven and founded the earth above water! God, who set great stones in the abysses of water, which never sink, but do to the end according to your will! O Lord my God, I call on you, hear my prayer, I will confess to you, O Lord, my sins and to you I will reveal my iniquities! I have sinned, Lord, I have sinned! Lawless. I was ungodly and spoke cunning things before you. My mouth is defiled by the sacrifices of idols, and by the table of the gods of Egypt. I have sinned, O Lord, before you, and I was ungodly, glorifying the idols of the dead and the dumb, and I am not worthy to open my mouth to you! I, the wretched, have sinned, O Lord, before you, I, the daughter of Penthephry, the proud elder! And with high pride I offer you, Lord, my prayer and I cry out to you! Deliver me, O Lord, from those who persecute me, because I have fled to you, as a child I have fled, as a child to my father and mother! And you, O Lord, stretch out your hands to me as a child-loving father, tear me from the hands of the devil, because, behold, the old lion, the cruel one persecutes me, and his children are gods and judges, whom I rejected from myself and killed, and the father their, devil, wants to swallow me! But you, Lord, deliver me from his hands, and snatch me from his mouth, so that the wolf will never snatch my soul and tear me apart and put me in the abyss of fire and in the sea storm, and the great whale will not devour me! Save me, O Lord, desolate, because my father and mother rejected me, because I defeated their gods! Now I am poor and desolate, and I have no hope but you, O Lord, for you are the father of the poor, and the protector of the persecuted, and the helper of the afflicted

! And now all the bonds of my father Penthefri are short-lived and imperceptible, and the gifts of your inheritance, Lord, are imperishable and eternal! Visit my orphanhood, Lord, because I have taken refuge in you because I took off my royal woven clothes and put on a black dress! Here, I unbuckled my golden belt and girded myself with rope and sackcloth! Here, I put the wreath off my head and dried myself with ashes! Behold, the floor of my chambers, paved with marble different and red, and smeared with all kinds of scents, is now smeared with my tears and sprinkled with ashes! Behold, O Lord, from the ashes and from my tears the mud is in my chamber as on the way! Behold, Lord, I have given my royal supper and food to other people's dogs, and in seven days I have tasted neither bread nor wine!"

A holy angel from Aseneth came from heaven and stood over her head and called her. Aseneth said: "Who is calling me, because the door of my chamber is locked, and the wall is high, how, then, does he enter my chamber?"

And "Tell me who you are!" The man said to her: Get up on your feet and I will tell you."

And he raised his eyes and saw. And, behold, he is like Joseph in all things, with his garments, and with his crown and his scepter, except that his face was like lightning, and his eyes like the light of the sun, and the hair of his head like a flame of fire, his hands and feet like iron burned with fire. When Aseneth saw it, he fell on his face with fear, and said, mercy on me, O Lord.

Have "

When she got up, he said to her:
"Throw away the black clothes you are wearing and the sackcloth from you, and shake the ashes off your head, and wash your face with the water of life, and put on a new bright dress, and gird your thighs with a beautiful double belt that is, and then come to me, and I will tell you the message that was sent to you."

And he opened his ark and took new and special clothes. And he took off his black dress and dressed in the light. And he girded the sackcloth and the sackcloth from his thighs, and girded himself with the golden girdle of his virginity, one over his thigh, and the other over his breast. And he shook off the ashes from his head, and washed his face with pure water, and covered his head with a beautiful and special veil.

He approached the man. And he, seeing her, said to her:
"Take a napkin from your head, because today you are a pure virgin, and your head is like a young man's. Dare, Aseneta, pure virgins, because, behold, the Lord has heard the words of your confession. Dare, Aseneta, because, behold, your name is written in the book of life and it will not be exterminated forever, because, behold, from today you will be renewed and revived. And you will eat the bread of life and drink the cup of healing. Dare, Aseneth, for, behold, the Lord has given you as a bride, and this one will be your husband, and you will not be called Aseneth, but your name will be the City."

said:

Asenethyou. Sit on the bed for a while until I set the table and the bread to eat, and I will bring you good wine.
that smells like heaven, and you will drink and go on your way."
   And the man said to her,
   Bring me a pot of honey.

   "327)

"Shall I send, my lord, to the village and bring you a vessel of honey?"
   The man said to her,
   "Go into your chamber and you will find honey.
   " filled with honey, and its scent - the breath of life.
And she took it and brought it to the man. He said to her:
   "As he said to me - there is no honeycomb in my house, and, behold, he brought it to me?"
   And Aseneta said:
   : It is as if it came out of your mouth, my lord, and its fragrance is like the fragrance of peace, like your mouth."
   The man stretched out his hand and took it by the head and said: Blessed are those who belong to the Lord God in repentance, as well as those who eat this honey, because this honey created bees from heavenly food. And the angels of God eat from this. And everyone who eats from it will not die forever. "The man stretched out his right hand and cut it off, and put his hand in Aseneth's mouth. And he stretched out his hand, and touched the end of the honey with his finger, which turned toward the east. And the appearance of his finger became bloody. And he put forth his hand the second time, and put the tip of his finger on the horn of the honeycomb, which looked toward the north. And his appearance became bloody. Aseneta stood on the left, watching everything she did. And immediately the bees came out of the wax of honey, white as snow. Their wings were red as a ruby, and their heads were as gilded, and their sting was sharp, and all the Asenets were entwined from head to toe and mouth. They were as big as hornets. The man said to the bees:
   "Go to your former places!"
   Leaving Aseneta, they all fell to the ground and died.
And the man said:

(328)

"Arise and go to your place!
" And the man said to her,
Do you see these words?"
[Aseneta] said,
"I saw all this, my lord.
" fire from the table and ate it. And a waxed fragrance came out of the fire and filled the chamber. And Aseneta said to him:
   "Lord, there are seven girls with me who serve me, who were born with me the same night, and I love them very much. If you say, let me call them and bless them as I do."
   And Aseneta called them. Aseneth:
"Take this table!"
toto the sky to the east. And he said:
"Be merciful, O Lord, to your handmaid, for I have spoken insolently before you in ignorance!"
When this happened, a young man from Joseph's servant came and said:
: from the servant who found himself in the house and Joseph said:

"Prepare a beautiful dinner for me, because Joseph, the mighty man of God, is coming to us today!

" Joseph came and sat on the throne of her father Penthephry. And Aseneta brought water to wash his feet. And Joseph said to her, feet." And he said to him [Aseneth]:

(329)

mywash the other's feet! "She persuaded him, and washed his feet. Joseph took her right hand and kissed her, and Aseneth kissed his head. Her parents came from her inheritance and saw her sitting with Joseph, dressed in wedding clothes. And they rejoiced, and glorified God, and ate and drank together.to Joseph, "In the morning I will call the boyars and satraps of the land of Egypt, and I will prepare a wedding for you, and you will take Aseneth as your wife.

Joseph spent that day with Penthephry and did not go to Aseneth, for he said,

'It is not proper for a godly man to sleep with his wife before the wedding.'"

Joseph arose in the morning and went to Pharaoh and told him about Aseneth. And Pharaoh sent, and called Penthephry and his daughter. And Pharaoh marveled at her beauty, and said,

May the Lord God of Israel bless you, who has chosen you to be his bride, for you will be called the daughter of the Most High, and Joseph will be your husband forever."

"theirs. And Pharaoh said,
"May the Most High God bless you and multiply you forever!"

And they turned to one another and kissed each other. And Pharaoh made them a wedding, and a great supper, and a feast in seven days. And he summoned the boyars of all the lands of Egypt and commanded:

Aseneth, or transgresseth any thing, shall die a bitter death."

(330)

And to Aseneti. And Manasseh and Ephraim his brother were born in Joseph's house.

Then seven years of fruitfulness passed, and seven years of famine began. And Jacob heard of Joseph. And Israel entered into Egypt with all his house. And on the twenty-first day of the second month he dwelt in the land of Gesemi.

Aseneth said to Joseph,

"Shall I go and see your father, for your father is Israel and my father is?"

And Joseph said to her,

"Let us both go.

" And the brethren of Joseph met them, and worshiped them. They came with Joseph to Jacob and blessed them and kissed them. And they embraced Aseneth their father. And then they go and write together.

And Joseph and Aseneth went to their own house, and Simeon and Levi accompanied them. And Levi was on the right side of Aseneth, because they envied them, hating them, and Joseph on the left. And he held Aseneth by the hand of Levi, because he loved him as a prophet and a godly man, who feared God. And he saw the words written in heaven, and read them, and said to Aseneth secretly. And Levi was looking for a place to rest among the cherries.

And as Joseph and Aseneth passed by, the first son of Pharaoh saw them. And he saw Aseneth and desired her because of her great beauty. And he sent and called Simeon and Levi. And he came and stood before him. And he said to them,

"I know that men are stronger than all men. Now therefore, I pray thee, let me take away Aseneth Joseph, and I will be with her, and I will do for you whatsoever thou wilt. We are the sons of a pious husband and our father is a guest of the Most High God, and Joseph is our brother and beloved of God, so how are we going to do this cunning before God? And now listen to us and keep these words that are not spoken about our brother Joseph. Even if you are in that cunning thought, behold, our swords are drawn before you."

And he tore his swords from their scabbards and said,

"Do you see these swords? And God hath avenged them of the reproach of the children of Israel, which of the Sikhim are against our sister: and whosoever shall say unto her, Ichem the son of Hamor hath defiled her. And Levi stretched out his hand and raised it, saying:

"Do not be afraid, but beware! Do not speak evil words about our brother!"

They came out of him, leaving him in fear and trembling. The son of Pharaoh was overwhelmed, and he took great care of Aseneth, and he suffered evil. And his servants said in his ear, saying Behold, my lord, the sons of Valin and Rachel hate Joseph and Aseneth, and they envy them, and they shall be according to thy will. And they came to him at night, and said to them, "I know that you men are strong. And I would like to tell you something."

The older brothers Dan and Gad said to him: "Let our lord say to his servants what he wants, and we will do according to your will."

And Pharaoh's son rejoiced with great joy, from here, so that I could speak my secret words to my husbands!"

And all his servants went out. And he agreed on the sons of Jacob, saying:

"Blessing and death lie before the face of God. Receive, therefore, you a blessing and not death, for I know you, strong husbands, that you cannot die as wives, but dare and oppose your enemies. "I heard," he said, "your brother Joseph say to my father Pharaoh, 'Dan and Gad are children of slaves and they are not my brothers, and I am expecting the death of their father.' I will embitter them and all their family, so that I would not inherit with them, because children are slaves. And they sold me to the Ishmaelites, and I will repay them as they did to me, so that my father may die. ' And my father Pharaoh gave in to Joseph from me with you and tell them how to do it for you, and I will be your helper."

"you, my lord, help us, and what you command your servants, we will do."
beseech
"will take Aseneth as my wife.

I
"time to catch the wine." And he gave her 600 men capable of fighting and eight for escort. And now hear us, and give us men of war, and mighty men of war.

Dan and Gad said to him:
"Let us go at night and hide in the valley and hide in the reeds, and you take 50 archers with you and go forward from afar, and when Aseneta comes out, she will fall into our hands, and the husbands who are with we'll cut it down. And Aseneth shall flee with her chariot, and fall into desireth, and then we will slay Joseph. We will mourn for Aseneth, and we will kill his children before his eyes."

Pharaoh's son rejoiced when he heard these words. And he sent them with 2,000 warriors. And they came to the valley, and hid themselves in the reeds, and set in front of them five hundred [warriors], and there was a wide road between them.

Pharaoh's son went into his father's bedroom to kill him. And the guards of his father forbade him to come to him. And he said to them,
"I want to see my father, because I am going to pick my newly planted vineyard."
And the guards said to him, my firstborn son!"

He left in anger. And he took 50 of the archers' men on horseback, and went out, as Dan and Gad had told him.
Naphtali and Asher said to Dan and Gad,
"Why do you deceive your father Israel and your brother Joseph, because God protects him like the apple of his eye?" Didn't you sell him once, and now he is the king of the whole country, and also the savior and life-giver? And now again, if you try to deceive him, he will go up to heaven and send fire, and devour you."

the older brothers were angry with them and said,"
Shall we die as women?
And
" I am going, as you said, to the possession of my inheritance, but my soul is afraid, because you are separating from me?"
And Joseph said,
" Do not be afraid, for the Lord God is with you, and he will save you from evil as the apple of the eye, for I will go and divide the grain and divide it among all people, and the whole earth will not die of hunger."

(334)

Aseneta went on her way and came to a place with 600 husbands. Those who hunted her jumped out and started a fight with the husbands who were with Aseneth. And they cut them down with the edge of the sword. And her companions killed everyone. And Aseneth fled on his chariot. Levi informs his brothers about the misery of Aseneth. And he took every man his sword, and girded himself with it. And he took his shields upon his shoulders. And he took up his spear, and ran after Aseneth with speed. Aseneta ran forward. And, behold, the son of Pharaoh met with 50 husbands of horsemen. Aseneta saw him and trembled her whole body. And he was afraid of great fear, and called on the name of his God.

Benjamin was sitting on the chariot on the right side of Asenetina. Benjamin was only eighteen years old, and he was great, strong and powerful. His beauty was inexpressible, and his strength was like a pack of lions. And he was very pious. And as he sat upon the chariot, he jumped up, and took a stone out of the brook, and filled his hand, and drew it toward Pharaoh's son. And he struck him behind the left ear, and wounded him with a great and severe wound. And suddenly the son of Pharaoh fell from his horse to the ground. And [Benjamin] climbed on the rock and said to the chariot driver Aseneth:

"Give me 50 stones from the stream!"

He gave them to him. And he pulled them out and killed 50 men who were with Pharaoh's son. And he pierced all the stones through their blind eyes. The sons of Leah, Reuben, and Simeon, Levi, Judah, and Zebulun, chased after the men who were hunting, and suddenly attacked them and slaughtered them all.

. their own. And the son of Pharaoh died at the hands of Benjamin, and all who were with him perished at his hands. And now let us come and kill Aseneth, and flee into the thicket of reeds.

(335)

And they came and drew their swords. Seeing them, Aseneta said:

"Lord my God, revive me from death, because she said to me: 'Your soul will live forever!' Deliver me from these men!"

And the Lord God heard her voice. And suddenly their swords fell to the ground from their hands and were like dust. Seeing this great proclamation, the sons of Zelfina and Valina were frightened and said to themselves,
"The Lord God is fighting for Aseneth against us.
" We have done wicked deeds against you, and the Lord God has rewarded us according to our deeds., have come unto thee, and their weapons have overwhelmed us."
She said to them
the avengers of thy reproachmen are pious and fear God, but go into the thicket of reeds while I pray for you and quench their wrath. Free yourselves, and do not be afraid of us, for God will judge between you and me."
